Martin, in the Law and Chancery Court, following arguments in the case. Judge Martin held, after hearing the evidence, that the bill was in dispute, and that the evidence was not sufficient to show the insolvency of the league. Proof was also submitted to the court that the plaintiff had been garnished, that he had made any defense, and that the court papers bore the inscription that the "200,000 League" had no funds belonging to Hyman. This had never been denied, and therefore it was argued that doubt was thrown upon the claim. The case will probably be taken up in the Federal court by the plaintiff.

VOTED ACCORDING TO BEST JUDGMENT

Congressman Carter Glass Explains His Position Toward Lumber Schedule.

FOLLOWS PARTY DOCTRINE

Points to the Declaration Made in Platform Adopted at Denver.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] LYNCHBURG, VA., April 21.—Congressman Carter Glass has only recently seen the criticism by several Virginia newspapers of the vote cast by him and four other Virginia Congressmen—Messrs. Lamb, Saunders, Lassiter and Maynard—on the lumber schedule of the Payne tariff bill. Touching this criticism, Mr. Glass said to-day in part:

"In the first place, no vote cast by a Virginia Democrat in the House affects the question of free lumber one way or another. The general debate on the tariff in the committee of the whole in the House was merely academic and the voting largely tentative. Everybody familiar with the procedure understood that the real party test would be upon the bill itself as reported from the Republican Committee of Ways and Means, amended as agreed by the Republican party in the House. When that proposition was submitted to the Virginia Democrats, they voted against the bill. Every Virginia Democrat likewise voted for Mr. Clark's motion to recommend the bill with instructions to report it back with amendments that would make it accord with the Democratic theory of a tariff for revenue, thus making up his party record."

Not a Theory. "We were not dealing with a theory. We were confronted with the plain certainty of tariff legislation by the Republican party in Congress, on strictly protection lines; and, this being the case, I did not consider it my duty to join with a score of Canadian border and Middle West Republicans to put certain products of Virginia and the South on the free list for the peculiar advantage of their constituents, only to see these same Republicans, a moment later, unite again with the rest of their party and tax the people of my State and section beyond endurance on the products of the North and Middle West. The suggestion that the Denver platform bound me to thus immolate my State and section is all moonshine. I was nominated for Congress before the Denver convention met; and in nearly every speech made in the campaign for re-election I emphasized the sectional phases of Republican tariff legislation and, from the hustings, as I have done for years through the columns of my newspaper, protested against the policy of protection to Virginia and the South to sell their raw materials to Northern manufacturers in competition with the world and at the same time force our people to purchase the products of these Northern manufacturers from the shelter of a high protective tariff."

"I am a tariff for revenue Democrat. I stand for equalizing duties; but I distinctly reject the Utopian idea of yielding every advantage that incidental protection affords the products of the South in order to give the industries of another section the double advantage of our materials free at one end of the proposition and high protection for their products at the other end."

The Denver Platform. "The general declaration of the Denver platform on the tariff question was for a 'revenue tariff' or 'duties' to a 'revenue basis.' Nobody will deny this. Then, distinctly and notoriously in response to the outcry of the American press, Republican as well as Democratic, against the exactions of the print paper trust, and the demand that it be punished by putting on the free list everything entering into or affecting the production of print paper, the convention made this separate declaration, not of 'historic party doctrine,' but of immediate public policy.

"Existing duties have given to the manufacturers of paper a shelter behind which they have organized combinations to raise the price of paper, thus imposing a tax upon the spread of knowledge. We demand the immediate repeal of the tariff on pulp, print paper, lumber, timber, logs and the like articles be placed on the free list."

"No candid disputant would contend that this was a demand to put lumber distinctly on the free list. It was a specific statement of a condition that prevailed in the paper trade, involving a tax on the spread of knowledge, and calling for a protective tariff. The particular evil be corrected by putting on the free list all articles affecting the production of print paper; and the declaration enumerates the articles. Obviously lumber was included only because the tariff on lumber affected the price of the paper. I am not saying that the tariff could readily be evaded by an inexpensive process had the terms 'lumber and timber' been omitted."

Action Misapprehended. "But suppose it be momentarily admitted that the Denver platform had a broader meaning than I have indicated, and that the demand was for a repeal of the duty on lumber as a necessity of life, then those who have criticized the five Virginia Congressmen have totally misapprehended the action of the House, for there was never the remotest prospect of doing this. The Denver platform demanded free lumber in this sense, it meant that all lumber must be free and not simply certain grades of lumber. But the Tawney amendment, which our newspaper critics so highly praise, and the only one that came within gunshot of passage placed only rough lumber on the free list, while it retained a high protective tariff on all other grades. In short, this distinguished Michigan Republican proposed to give the great planing mills and furniture factories of his and other States their lumber free of duty, and to let the collier protect those mills and factories by a high tariff on the goods they manufactured from a hoe handle to a dining table, from a single tree to a bedroom set! The Southern lumberman must pay a high tax to the Northern manufacturers on the axe with which he fells the tree and the helve with which he splits it to axe; must pay a high tax to the Northern manufacturer on the chain and harness with which he drags the log and on the equipment by which he ships it; must pay a high tax to the Northern manufacturers on the saw and on the engine and on everything he buys to prepare his lumber for the market."

"And then, when he comes to sell it to the Northern manufacturers, who have thus robbed him under the guise of a high protective tariff, this Southern lumberman must sell to the robbers in competition with the robbers. And that is gravely set up as historic Democratic doctrine! Everybody knows that the expensive material of a respectable dwelling, however humble, is not the rough lumber entering into its construction. It is the dressed lumber, the doors, floors, blinds, sash, framing, mill-stuff of all kinds; but the Tawney amendment did not propose to free these things of tax. It merely proposed to relieve the lumber manufacturer of Michigan and other Northern States by giving them rough lumber free of duty, leaving them, under the shelter of a high tariff, to extort all they could from the house-builder and furniture-maker and consumer generally. I do not know what my four Democratic colleagues from Virginia think, but I am glad to be numbered among those Southern Democrats who protested against this outrageous species of tariff jugglery."

The DeArmond Amendment. "The only proposition made to put all lumber on the free list was embodied in the amendment offered by Mr. DeArmond to the Payne bill, and then Mr. Tawney and the other Republicans who tried to put Southern lumber on the free list and retain the tariff from their manufactured stuffs, lined up with their party and snowed under the DeArmond amendment by a vote of 244 to 131, less than one-third voting for it."

"As to the nature of the small duty on lumber, it is not a protective tariff in the sense that it adds one thrup to the price of rough lumber to the general consumer. Nobody in Congress or out who knows anything about the subject and has any regard for his intellectual integrity, would pretend to say to the contrary. The duty does not increase the cost of lumber one farthing to a single consumer in Virginia or the South, or to any resident of the United States outside the State of Michigan, or to any resident of competition on the Canadian border. It is distinctly within the Democratic doctrine of a tariff for revenue, yielding, as I recall the figures, $1,500,000 to the Federal treasury. It incidentally preserves to Virginia and the South the lumber markets of New England and other Northern States easily reached by Canadian lumber. One will search the tariff speeches in vain to find any serious contention that the dollar duty on lumber could increase the price one cent to a single inhabitant of the United States outside a very limited territory, whose people furnish a century have grown rich by collecting tariff tribute from the balance of the country, and whose Congressmen stood out in the House recently for the highest degree of protection for their own products and free trade in the products of other sections.
